

ABSTRACT

Disclosed is a method for producing a tube comprising a compressible peripheral wall in an injection molding process by using an injection mold that is provided with a core and a female die. The opening end of the tube is produced in a neck mold which retains the unfinished tube also during opening of the mold. Special measures prevent the soft plastic of the unfinished tube from sticking to the mold.